

JAPANESE RAID SOVIET POST ON EASTERN FRONT

Nazis Continue To Hammer

At Gates Of Moscow And Rostov In Smashes

By The Associated Press.

With Adolf Hitler's armies pounding at the gates of Moscow and Rostov in the west, Russia today announced a small Japanese patrol had attacked a guard post on her Far Eastern frontier.

This clash, like many in the past, may have been merely an isolated incident, but against the background of Japanese troop concentration in Manchukuo and the growing question of Japan's intentions as a pact partner of Germany it bulked larger in its implications.

Only yesterday the new soldier premier of Japan, Gen. Hideki Tojo, pleading for internal solidarity for Japan to meet her destiny, declared for an "ever-expanding progression" for the empire—a course in which "no international pressure can disturb me."

"There is no retreat!" Tojo told his audience of public officials at Osaka.

Wounded On Each Side

The Russian-Japanese frontier skirmish occurred last Thursday, according to Tass, official Russian news agency, whose dispatch from Vladivostok said 20 Japanese soldiers attacked frontier guards near the village of Raskino.

Tass said that there were some wounded on each side and that the Japanese abandoned some of their arms and ammunition on Soviet soil.

Russia's immediate, vital concern however, still is the German drive on Moscow on the central front and Rostov, gateway to the Caucasus, in the south. The hurried Red army was reported to have yielded ground, but strong defenses still bar the Germans from their twin goals.

A new press estimate from Kuibyshev, seat of part of the Russian government on the Volga, put German dead and wounded at 3,500,000 men, apart from a huge toll in armament. The Moscow radio, reported that the Red air force had destroyed 500 German planes on the ground alone in the week of Oct. 11-18.

Nazi Vanguards Edge Forward

"The enemy still is powerful but does not have the possibilities for considerable reinforcements while we have every possibility to increase our forces and means of waging war," said the Kuibyshev newspaper Volga Commune.

Both the Germans and Russians agree that Nazi vanguards have forced closer to Moscow but degree of German successes in the huge struggle in the snows and rains of Russian winter is disputed sharply.

Armored German columns were said in Berlin to have broken Russian resistance on a broad sector of the central front in smashes closer to the Red capital.

DNB said the Germans have over-run strong Russian defenses studded with casemates and concrete pillboxes but did not tell whether this drive was on the south, west or northwest—the three directions from which the Nazis have been closing in on Moscow.

Russian reports, on the other hand, acknowledged that Moscow's defense line southwest of the capital had been bowed by German onslaught but declared that repeated assaults had failed to hammer through a break.

Red Guns Blast Tanks

Biz Russian guns, front-line dispatches said, tore up charging German tank columns with point-blank fire, allowing infantrymen to withdraw a short distance and establish a new line in the Maloyaroslavets region, 65 miles southwest of Moscow.

In bloody but indecisive fighting on the other approaches to the capital, Russian reports said even

ROY N. MERRYMAN, 59, DIES IN STEUBENVILLE

Former State Senator Was

Ill Only Brief Time

By The Associated Press.

STEUBENVILLE, Oct. 27—Roy N. Merryman, former state senator from the 20th-22nd district, and a leading political figure and civic leader in Jefferson county for many years, died Sunday at 8:20 in his home on Lawson ave. here. He was 59.

Mr. Merryman, who was directing the Republican campaign in Steubenville in this fall's municipal election, was taken ill Saturday with what appeared to be an attack of acute indigestion. He apparently recovered but suffered another attack Sunday afternoon. His death was attributed to a heart attack.

A son of David Merryman and Mary Armstrong Merryman, he was born in Steubenville Oct. 12, 1882. His parents moved to Bloomfield when he was young and he was educated in the schools there. He received his legal training in the

Roosevelt's Address Awaited As America Observes 'Navy Day'

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27—Half in war, and half out of a shooting war, the navy and the nation alike observed Navy day today.

For warships in continental ports the holiday orders directed ships to don full dress—breaking out their strings of signal flags in gala array.

But it was battle dress—as usual—for the fleet units out at sea, especially those that plowed the gray swells of the North Atlantic to guard munitions bound for England and Russia.

Against this contrasting background President Roosevelt will bring the day's celebration to a climatic close tonight by delivering his first address on world affairs in six weeks.

Advance indications are that the speech (shortly after 10 East Liverpool time) will be one of primary importance and there is general expectation that it will provide presidential comment on these main problems of the day: Efforts to speed up defense production; Russia's urgent need for munitions to continue fighting; the prospects for war or peace in the Far East, and the accomplishments of the navy in keeping Atlantic sea lanes clear of hostile craft.

Mr. Roosevelt's last major speech was Sept. 11, when, after relating a series of sea war incidents including the attack on the destroyer Greer, he called Nazi U-boat raiders "rattlesnakes" and said, in effect, that the Atlantic fleet had been given orders to shoot at sight.

CAN'T RETREAT, TOKYO WARNED

Premier Maps Unswerving Course Of 'Expansion'

By The Associated Press.

TOKYO, Oct. 27—An unswerving course of "ever-expanding progression" was charted for Japan today by Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo who served notice that "no international pressure can disturb me."

"There is no retreat!" the premier told a group of 200 public officials in a plea for internal solidarity yesterday at Osaka, Japan's great industrial center.

Speaking as home minister, Tojo, who holds the home and war ministry portfolios in addition to the premiership, declared firmly:

"World environment is changing so quickly we cannot tell what lies in store for Japan but we must go on and develop in ever-expanding progression."

"Difficulties Will Arise"

(United States Navy Secretary Frank Knox said in Washington last Friday that a collision in the Pacific was inevitable if Japan persisted in her course of expansion.)

"Naturally difficulties will arise," said Tojo, who took over the Japanese government a week ago Saturday.

"But if Japan's hundred millions merge and go forward nothing can stop us."

"If this state of preparedness is completed, diplomacy becomes an easy matter; wars can be fought with ease. Unity! Unity!—that is what makes people one and a whole, solving all problems."

Total Strength Called For

The premier linked his foreign and domestic programs with the declaration that "the policy to which Japan is committed is to be enforced in the face of all forces of opposition, the first requisite is to develop the total strength of her hundred million people, using their momentum in the prosecution of that policy."

Japan's policy has been stated time and again to include establishment of a "greater East Asia co-prosperity sphere," settlement of the conflict with China and fulfillment of obligations under the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance.

KNOX ASKS U. S. UNITE TO AVOID FRANCE'S FATE

Denounces 'Isolationism' In Navy Day Speech; Cites Mistake Of Russia

By The Associated Press.

DETROIT, Oct. 27—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox today called for "national solidarity and unity" in order that the United States might make certain of escaping the fate of France.

Knox, in a Navy day speech, urged an end to "selfish partisanship and internal division."

"If we see resolution to determine that this shall be our course," he said, "let us recall the pitiful situation in France where the most bloody reprisals now are being resorted to by France's German masters in a desperate effort to save themselves from assassination."

"Contemplate the pitiful spectacle of the aged Pétain pleading with his people to avoid still more bloody reprisals by more thorough subservience to their masters."

Denouncing isolationism, Secretary Knox said that Russia has practiced a policy of "Russia first" only to find that it proved disastrous.

The navy chief said he is sure the American people will not permit "isolated instances" to bring them into war.

"We have had plenty of incidents to provoke resentment of the bitterest sort, enough of them to prove easily and readily that we are not going to permit ourselves to indulge in any rash action because of isolated incidents," he said.

U. S. Weapons Feared, Von Ribbentrop Says

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27—John Cudahy, former ambassador to Belgium, gave the senate foreign relations committee this account of an interview he obtained, as a journalist, with Adolf Hitler:

"When I had this famous interview with Hitler some four months ago, I put up to him, first of all, because it was of great interest to the American people at that time, the question of convoys. I always had been told that Hitler was a great rafter and raver and there was one story going the rounds, and quite authentic, that in one of his rages he fell on the floor and started chewing a rug; but I found him in this interview very calm and composed and very lucid in his mental processes."

"He told me about convoys very quietly, you know as well as I do that convoys mean war." So I asked him about the legal precedents of the situation. He said, 'why, your nation and the British have set the legal precedents—why ask me about that?'

Ribbentrop said . . . that the German government feared the entry of this country into the war. Why? not because of our present power but because of our vast potentiality for making war. The Germans realize, and Hitler has stated, that the last war was won by American arms. Especially would the effect be disastrous upon the morale, I think, of the German people."

"Now the German attitude, the attitude of the German empire, is a very unique one toward this war. They have no enthusiasm whatever. They are apathetic. Yet they fear peace. They fear a peace of vengeance that will be even worse than the treaty of Versailles, and so they will go on and on indefinitely. . . ."

"Ribbentrop told me that our entering the war would mean a war of hemispheres and that it would go on indefinitely and probably would destroy the world."

Cudahy's testimony was given last week at a closed session of the committee and was made public today.

Deaths Mount To 15 As Fire Engulfs Bus After Crackup, Blast

By The Associated Press.

LANTON, Ala., Oct. 27—Death claimed its 15th victim today in the Montgomery-Birmingham passenger bus crash which transformed the interior of the carrier into an inferno.

W. P. Alton, driver of the third section of the local run last night between the two Alabama cities, died in a hospital here of burns resulting from his heroic efforts to rescue his screaming passengers.

Lou Finney, Boston Red Sox outfielder, identified one of the dead as his first cousin, Mary Eleanor Finney, 24, physical education teacher at Montevallo, Ala. She was enroute to the school from her home at Buffalo, Ala.

Bodies of the other 13, burned beyond recognition, awaited positive identification at two funeral parlors.

Coroner J. M. Martin said three other dead tentatively have been identified as William D. Davis, Troy; Alonzo Renfro, Banks, and Alton B. Yates, Union Springs. All were youths from south Alabama enroute to a civilian conservation corps camp here.

The bus struck the concrete railing of a bridge four miles south of here last night. Almost instantly it was a mass of flames.

Hardies Jones, carpenter who lives 100 yards from the scene, ran out to see Alton tumble from the bus, dragging a man by the arm.

"The driver went back into the bus," Jones said, "and came out with some more people. His clothing was on fire, and he ran to the roadside. We cut his clothes off and sent him to the hospital."

Mac Stephens, another witness, quoted Alton as saying the bus caught fire just before it struck the bridge railing, although the explosion came after the crash.

C. V. Courson, Montgomery manager for southeastern Greyhound lines, said 27 to 30 persons were on the bus.

15 ARE TRAPPED BY MINE BLAST

16 Rescued, 29 Others Safe After Kentucky Explosion

By The Associated Press.

MADISONVILLE, Ky., Oct. 27—Sixteen miners were rescued and 29 others were reported safe today following an explosion in the mine of the Sterling Coal Co. at Daniel Boone, a small mining community 11 miles southwest of Madisonville.

Fifteen men were reported missing.

The mine was wrecked badly by the blast, the cause of which, officials said, was not determined immediately.

The rescued men were brought to the surface in barrels to which ropes had been attached. The mine cage was put out of order by the explosion.

A full shift crew of 60 men was in the workings at the time of the blast.

The 15 men are reported 2,800 feet back from the main shaft and cut off from that entrance.

One of the rescued men, whose name was not ascertained, told a reporter that the explosion was terrific, that it knocked out all the men in his group; that it tore out all the mine car tracks and tore down all the wiring.

Rescue workers from throughout western Kentucky were rushed here to help local squads attempt to reach the missing men.

Carroll Pattison of Westernport, Md., president of the company owning the mine, said it employed 125 men and that he planned to leave immediately for Daniel Boone.

Admiral Stark, in testimony made public today, told the senate foreign relations committee last week that "armed merchant ships have brought down a considerable number of planes." Stark testified in support of a house-approved resolution to repeal sections of the neutrality law to permit the arming of merchant ships.

The admiral said that the arming of merchant craft would lessen the likelihood of their attack either by airplanes or submarines.

As for submarine raiders, Stark said they would not risk presenting a surface target if a ship mounted guns but would stay submerged where their effectiveness "is restricted very greatly."

The admiral stressed emphatically the expression of Sen. Murray (D) of Montana that the arming of merchant ships would increase the danger of United States involvement in the conflict.

PRANKSTERS WARNED OF DETENTION IN JAIL

By The Associated Press.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Oct. 27—Two women who arrived from Europe today after 15 years residence in France said that a secret underground organization is smuggling stranded R.A.F. fliers back to England and helping young Frenchmen flee the country to join Free French forces.

The women, Miss Helen Hill of New York and Miss Violet Maxwell, a British subject, said they had no details of how the underground system operates and many of the British fliers, forced down over occupied France did not know the methods of their benefactors.

Young Frenchmen who want to join the Free French forces, the women related, just disappear from their homes and within a few weeks their families get word that they are outside of France.

The women said that in unoccupied France persons listening to British or American radio broadcasts are subject to fines ranging from 25 to 25,000 francs and that many people are turning against the Vichy government for what they termed its defeatist attitude.

53,000 Miners Remain Idle Despite New Roosevelt Plea

SENATE BEGINS HISTORIC STUDY OF SHIP ARMING

Administration Leaders Bid For Final Action On Bill Within Two Weeks

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27—The senate convened today to start debate on history-making legislation which would restore complete freedom of the seas to American merchantmen and White House lieutenants called for final action within two weeks.

The bill, broadening the house-approved ship arming measure, would permit American vessels to sail into non-forbidden belligerent ports and combat zones. It was approved 13 to 10 by the foreign relations committee Saturday.

Sen. Nye (R) of North Dakota, an opponent of administration foreign policy, said that the committee action was "a blow below the belt to the American people who demand that the senate give full consideration to the measure."

Connally Sees Quick Action

Although Nye's remark seemed to hint at prolonged debate, Chairman Connally (D) of Texas of the foreign relations group held this view:

"I do not believe it will take more than two weeks to pass the bill through the senate. Although there have been mummings about a filibuster, this is not the kind of a situation in which anybody would conduct a filibuster."

"This is a time of emergency and I don't believe the country will stand for any filibustering tactics." Connally remarked several opponents of administration foreign policy assured him they have no intention of seeking to delay action on the pending measure.

Administration authorities said they have 52 certain votes for the bill and predicted that before the final vote the total will reach 60, or a majority of almost 2 to 1.

Would Change Title Of Law

There was no estimate of voting strength from the opposition, but some opponents said privately they only wish to make a senate record before the measure comes to an already-assured vote of approval.

Stark Says Armed Ships Would Cut Sub, Plane Raids

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27—Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, believes that more than half of the "successful" attacks against merchant vessels in the current war have been aimed at unarmed ships.

Admiral Stark, in testimony made public today, told the senate foreign relations committee last week that "armed merchant ships have brought down a considerable number of planes." Stark testified in support of a house-approved resolution to repeal sections of the neutrality law to permit the arming of merchant ships.

WAR

streets are changing hands back and forth in a grim struggle for Kalinin, 95 miles to the northwest, and fighting is being waged remorselessly at Moshaisk, 57 miles to the west.

Although a picture thus was presented of a fairly static situation before Moscow despite mighty and unabating Nazi pressure, Russia's important oil pipeline terminus and rail-water junction at the gateway to the Caucasus, Rostov-on-

Don, seems to be in growing jeopardy.
The Russians admitted the loss of Stalino, important Donets basin industrial center about 100 miles northwest of Rostov, and said fighting is continuing at nearby Makeevka and at Taganrog, on the sea of Azov 40 miles from Rostov.
The Russian announcement confirmed the German claim to have taken Stalino but said it was abandoned only after the Germans had paid with 60,000 men killed and wounded in several days of fighting. The Russians have not admitted yielding Kharkov, also claimed by the Germans, but a battle in that region was reported still raging.

He soon became interested in politics and was elected Steubenville city solicitor in 1912 which office he served four years. He was prosecuting attorney of Jefferson county from 1926 to 1930 and state senator from 1933 to 1940. He was a member of the law firm of Merryman and Griesinger.

During the World War Mr. Merryman was connected with the department of justice in Oklahoma. He was a former chairman of the Republican executive committee and was one of the organizers of the Jefferson County Social Service union which directed welfare and relief for many years.

Mr. Merryman was an elder in the Westminster Presbyterian church, a 32nd degree Mason, and a Shriner. He also was a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Elks lodge.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Mary Vorhees Merryman, whom he married in 1911, and one son, Robert Merryman of Indianapolis.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. in his home by Rev. D. W. Gerow, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church. Burial will be in the Union cemetery here.

of the Axis' strength from the east.

Equally adamant, 6,000 women workers at Coventry demanded that the government "relieve the pressure upon our brave Soviet allies and thus speed the day of victory."

Britain's R. A. F. raided north-west Germany again last night and early today, following up forays over northern France and a smash at German shipping in which a Canadian air squadron was credited with damaging three ships off The Netherlands coast. Hamburg was the main night target.

The Germans listed four ships totaling 20,000 tons as sunk in British waters during the weekend and three others totaling 8,500 as damaged by air attacks. Some German raiders bombed England last night but the British said damage was slight.

toward Germany in the past, the state department head said he had spent six years after Adolf Hitler rose to power in 1933 in an effort to prevail on the reich "to observe conditions of peace."

"That group around Hitler was just as impervious to our pleas and our requests during those years as a piece of statuary."

Cites American Aid
Hull, speaking of German plans to invade Great Britain, said the Nazis "had all of their platforms erected in Berlin for the greatest victory celebration in history." But, he added, "our aid to England helped to induce the German generals finally to decide against the invasion, and that was called off."

Hull expressed the view that every act and utterance of Hitler showed that he was "out to dominate the earth."

"It was wrong about that," he continued, "to throw me out the window. And feel perfectly safe in the future."

NEUTRALITY

mittee bill knocking out the present neutrality act restrictions against the arming of ships and their free movement over the seas is the main issue before the senate, Sen. Bridges (R) of New Hampshire and Gurney (R) of South Dakota said they will offer an amendment to change the title of the neutrality law.

The present title calls the act one to preserve American "neutrality in wars between foreign states." Bridges and Gurney agreed that this country is not neutral and Bridges asserted it is "assinine" to pretend it is.

Bridges, Gurney and Sen. Austin (R) of Vermont have submitted an amendment for complete repeal of the neutrality law, which also contains provisions for government control of munitions exports. The amendment was not acted upon by the foreign relations committee, but Gurney said that it will be offered from the floor.

House Leaders Confident
Wendell L. Wilkie, although reiterating his views that the entire neutrality law should be wiped from the books, said over the weekend he hopes a substantial number of Republicans will support the foreign relations committee bill.

In a formal report on the measure Saturday, the foreign relations group said its expanded bill is necessary because "it appears to be the fixed policy of the Nazi government to sink United States ships wherever they may be found."

On the house side, meanwhile, both Speaker Rayburn and Chairman Bloom (D) of New York of the foreign affairs committee expressed confidence that their chamber will accept the foreign relations committee bill, if the senate approves it.

MAN SUFFERS INJURY IN POTATO MACHINERY

Walter Cole, 33-year-old farmer near West Point, was in "good condition" today in City hospital with injuries suffered when caught and denuded in the machinery of a potato digger about noon Saturday.

Mr. Cole stopped the tractor with the power shaft to the digger still turning and got down to remove weeds from the machine. In some manner the mechanism caught his overalls and he literally broke out of his clothes as the machine began pulling him into the webbing.

Shaken and bruised, his clothing was entirely ripped from him, except for the neckband of his shirt. His brother, Robert, wrapped him in a blanket and hurried him to the hospital. His injuries are not serious and he probably will be released Tuesday.

The Coming Thing

THERE has been no economy in government because the people didn't really want any; they just wanted to talk about it. When the time came for a showdown, they were just as greedy for a raid on the pork barrel as the politicians. Many an officeholder won favor by cutting in the old home district on a juicy thing; few ever won anything but a headache for letting some other officeholder beat them to the gravy train.

What it all amounts to is that saving money in government hasn't been the popular thing to do. The money savers were queer fish and regarded with suspicion. When the New Dealers finally sold the idea of getting out of the hole by digging a deeper hole, money savers became first cousins to traitors. It was official doctrine that economy, if permitted, would wreck America.

But all that is cash over the counter new. A new era is dawning. It isn't generally realized yet, but the most popular thing in America to do in the near future is going to be saving money in non-defense government spending. The near future will arrive when the impact of the new taxes finally makes Americans realize that they and they alone are going to pay the bills.

Situation Critical

RUSSIA's own official admissions of a critical situation must be taken at face value. There is no reason why the Red army should try to kid either itself or the governments rooting for it to hold the line.

The only potential break remaining for Red fortunes in the war is that Germany may make the error of a Pyrrhic victory, exhausting its own military strength in the attempt to end Russian military resistance. There seems no possibility now that Russia, given a respite from the full fury of German striking power by the descent of winter, might be able next spring to recover what it has lost unless Germany pays too heavy a price for its gain and brings on its own collapse from exhaustion.

Once more anti-Axis populations have fallen into the easy error of wishful thinking. By wishing too eagerly for Russia to be able to do what no one believed in advance Russia was able to do, the anti-Axis bloc has prepared itself poorly for the realization that now confronts it.

Russian power has been driven out of the continent into Asia and probably can be isolated there indefinitely. British power likewise has been driven off the continent and confined to the United Kingdom. That is the situation that must be dealt with in the months to come.

Everybody's Navy Now

IN parts of inland United States, the navy seems to have been regarded as a stepchild. But not any more. Once more the navy is playing its traditional role in the national security program.

On Navy day, 1941, (today) the navy is stripped for action, ready to meet force with resistance wherever force may be exerted. If war comes, the navy will see action first. Many think that if war comes it may be almost exclusively a naval war.

In the chaos of unreadiness that was costed by America's sudden realization after France's collapse that except for Great Britain it stood alone in a world reverting to jungle law, only the navy could claim to be prepared for duty. It was neither large enough nor sufficiently equipped to do what needed to be done, but it was strong enough to constitute a major factor in determination of military strategy. This had not merely happened. It had been planned and worked for by men who had vision greater than that possessed at the time by those who had let their hopes deceive them into a false sense of security. On Navy day this year, they might well be given the salute they have earned from their critics. President Roosevelt, particularly, who often was criticized for his zeal in looking after the navy, has earned credit.

Hitler Must Be Astonished

THERE is no hint in Adolf Hitler's writing that he expected the trouble his strong-arm regime is encountering in conquered countries. Just as he has been unable to understand why his invading armies were resisted and has cursed Winston Churchill and now is cursing Franklin D. Roosevelt for "prolonging" the war, Hitler must be astonished at refusal of Frenchmen, Dutchmen, Norwegians and Serbs to accept him as a deliverer.

The fact he scarcely can be expected to grasp is that his regime has nothing to offer, not even hope. Rauschning, the former Danzig politician who has written so interestingly of the Nazis and their plans, predicts that the present war will be followed, after a short truce, by another—and that Hitler will retire to Berchtesgaden and think up a new religion. Meanwhile he has nothing to offer but the oldest thing there is—despotism.

The hopes of man, all the ranting and raving of authoritarians to the contrary notwithstanding, still reside in more, not less, political participation by the individual. Whatever may have been the conditions in France, Denmark, Belgium, The Netherlands, Yugoslavia, Norway, Czechoslovakia and Poland before they were conquered, they are worse now because there is no hope, only resentment and desperation finding expression at a cost of 50 hostages for every Nazi invader murdered from ambush.

Today And Tomorrow

America's Greatest Job Is To Spur Arm Output Until It Surpasses War Machine Behind Hitler

By WALTER LIPPMANN

FOR this country the main conclusion to be drawn from the Russian campaign is that our armament program must be expanded greatly.

This conclusion no longer can be altered by military developments on the Russian front. The fundamental facts will remain, which are that Hitler has occupied or immobilized the most important industrial resources of European Russia, and that for some time to come he has blunted if he has not destroyed the threat of a Russian offensive power in eastern and central Europe.

On the other hand, Hitler is further than ever from a position where he could, even if he wished it, propose any kind of negotiable peace. From one end of Hitler's Europe to the other the relation between Hitler and his victims has become one of such deadly, irreconcilable enmity that no demobilization of the German military machine is now conceivable.

Between the Russians and the Germans the bridges have been burned. The evidence for that is the decision to defend Moscow but the decision to destroy what cannot be removed into the interior—and last but by no means least insignificant—the realistic moderation of Stalin's demands on the British and the Americans.

These are the actions of a government which would seem to have no idea of attempting to follow the course of Marshal Pétain and the Vichy government.

Between the Germans and the French the bridges are burning, and Hitler now must know that the possibility of voluntary collaboration by the French people has vanished. Even with his armies in occupation of France he cannot police the country effectively enough to protect the lives of his soldiers or to prevent continual terrorism and sabotage.

Thus he never can withdraw his armies from France and still have any hope whatever that Marshal Pétain or Admiral Darlan or any one else would or could "collaborate" with Nazi Germany. The chasm is unbridgeable because between the Nazis and the French there is now a record of inexplicable horrors.

HITLER is master of a continent which he cannot govern except by incessant and ruthless violence. Therefore, he never can demobilize. And since he cannot demobilize, he must extract from Europe every last resource of materials and manpower that can be mobilized for war, and he must plan new and still more far-flung campaigns of conquest in the hope of finding some way to break all resistance outside his empire and within it.

Thus, with the occupation of the industrial centers of European Russia, the preponderant bulk of the industrial capacity of the world now is divided between Hitler on the one hand, America and Britain on the other.

It is certain beyond the possibility of dispute that Hitler must and that Hitler will devote his half of the world's industrial capacity to war production. It is, therefore, imperative—no matter what view one takes on all other questions of the strategy of the conflict—that the American arsenal alone should develop a capacity that is clearly superior to that of the whole of Hitler's Europe.

This is a conclusion which Americans must reach regardless of whether they are only an "improbable" defense of the western hemisphere, or whether they want to negotiate a stalemate peace, or whether they want to aid the Allies, or whether they want to fight Hitler and defeat him. On any assumption which fundamental common ground in the fact that an armament capacity superior to Hitler's Europe is indispensable.

ON this matter there can be no substantial difference of view between the intelligent isolationists and the realistic interventionists. For suppose we followed the advice of the isolationists, abandoned Europe to Hitler, and urged Britain to come to terms with him.

Could we, thereafter, conceivably negotiate with Hitler on any terms of equality if behind him there were mobilized for total war the whole resources of the Old World, while we had mobilized only 15 to 25 percent of our resources?

As against his tanks, airplanes, submarines and his fiercely disciplined legions, what would be the bargaining value of our new automobiles, refrigerators, office buildings, hotels, plumbing fixtures and the thousand and one other conveniences and gadgets to which we have become accustomed?

No one can be an intelligent isolationist and not recognize that the unavoidable logic of his position commits him an armament program in which the total capacity of America alone, of an isolated America, is superior to that of Hitler and all his Allies and vassals.

It does not matter whether we mean to fight a total war against Hitler or whether we merely mean to survive alone in a world where Hitler is mobilized for total war, the conclusion is the same.

Before Hitler can organize his European conquests and long before he can establish any kind of control over the outposts and approaches of the western hemisphere, there must exist on this continent an organized war production that is beyond doubt decisively greater than Hitler's. Nothing less than that is adequate even for a passive defense. Nothing less than that is sufficient for a victorious defense that would lead to peace and a genuine demobilization. It is to this conclusion that we must address our principal effort. What can be done immediately in Russia must be done chiefly by the Russians themselves, and to their everlasting credit they have proved they know it, facing the fury of the assault without flinching or complaining, asking nothing of their partners which is impossible and therefore, meant, like Mr. Reynaud's plea of June, 1940, as a maneuver to cover their own defeatism.

So, without minimizing the material and the psychological importance of keeping open the supply routes into Russia, and of sending over them what can be sent as rapidly as possible, the vitally important contribution of America, and the most convincing action it can take is to lay down at once a greatly expanded program of arms production.

The Russian resistance, which is invaluable to our own defense both in the Atlantic and in the Orient, rests on the view that this struggle will not be decided by pitched battles but by the mobilization of the superior resources of the anti-Hitler coalition.

Thus the Russian resistance is not suicidal but rational provided that we, the greatest and least vulnerable member of the coalition, do in fact mobilize our power. The Russians, we now see, are not the dreaming Slavs of the romantic legends, but when put to the test, they are as realistic as we are brave.

The most powerful support we can give them, now at this moment, is to prove by acts that we are mobilizing our power, not partially, not 25 percent of it, but all of it that can be mobilized.

THIS is a struggle in which nothing can be improvised, where everything that is done has been prepared long in advance. For this is a war of complicated machines operated by highly skilled men. In general it may be said that the result of any campaign is determined by what was planned and accomplished in the preceding 18 months.

Thus the Allied disaster in the spring of 1940 was prepared in the winter of 1933-1939 by the failure of the British and the French to order enough equipment, and by our own failure to repeal the arms embargo. That was when the necessary airplanes and tanks and guns were not ordered.

The inability of the British to take the offensive now is due to the fact that in the summer of 1940, they lacked the money to order enough tanks and planes while we did not get around to lease-lend until seven months ago.

The program we adopted last winter will not be producing the full effect until the end of next year. Because of this time lag, it is of the utmost importance that there should be no administrative delay and no political obstruction in adopting the greatly expanded program which the President has promised.

It will take Hitler time to organize and exploit his Russian conquests. It will take us time to organize our own production. Our greatest task is to make sure that in this race between Hitler, who will be organizing all of Europe, and the Americans, who should be organizing a continent, we come out indisputably on top.

If there is anything we can do, this surely is it. So we must do it. For no one, neither the people abroad nor Americans in the future, ever will forgive us if, possessing the greatest industrial capacity in the history of mankind, we are too selfish, too lazy, too befuddled by politics and personalities, to mobilize our matchless wealth for the defense of human liberty.

Arms For The Americas

Share To Be 150 Million In Second Lease-Lend Measure

By LAWRENCE S. HAAS

U. P. Latin-American Editor

THE sum of $150,000,000 in the new lease-lend appropriations of $5,985,000,000 asked by President Roosevelt and pending in congress, is to be allocated to the Latin-American countries for the acquisition of military and naval armament and equipment.

This amount is equivalent to only slightly more than 2 1/2 percent of the total appropriation. It cannot buy a large amount of armament as modern armament goes but it is a step which may indicate that the Latin-American countries are to share in any future lease-lend appropriations enabling them to acquire the arms, planes and ships they consider essential to carry out an appreciable role in the scheme of hemisphere defense.

It was disclosed that the U. S. army will allocate $100,000,000 of this sum for airplanes, ordnance and other materials, and that the balance of $50,000,000 will go for warships and naval materials. The military arms and planes will be allocated among 18 Latin-American countries, the naval armament among 16 countries.

Talked To Death

By JACK STINNETT

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT may be having a little trouble with his revision of the neutrality bill to permit the arming of merchant vessels, but it can't be any worse than President Wilson had with a similar measure 24 years ago.

Some of the pieces in the present pattern seem to fit exactly those of nearly a quarter of a century ago. In those days, it was called the "armed neutrality" bill. The house had passed it by a big majority (house passage of the 1917 bill was unprecedented for a controversial measure. The vote was 403 to 13.)

In both instances, the measures faced really bitter battles in the senate. Both times, a hard-hitting minority in the upper house made the majority put on kid gloves. Now, as then, "incidents" have popped up to influence the vote.

In 1917, it was the "Zimmerman note," which publicized an alleged plot on the part of Germany to ally Mexico and Japan in a war against the United States. In 1941, it was the sinking of the Lehigh and the Bold Venture and the torpedoing of the Kearny, all in the midst of deliberations on the bill.

BUT the points of difference are considerable, too.

On a cold, dreary Friday, March 2, 1917, the armed neutrality bill reached the senate floor. There seemed no doubt about its passage—it was only a question of when the vote would come. It couldn't be long because the 64th congress was to die at noon, Sunday.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, and a score of other notables, were in the galleries. On the floor, the late Sen. Robert M. LaFollette (whose son, Young Bob, now holds down a stool in the same isolationist camp) was bristling for action and behind him at the moment were just 10 senators—ten of 35 representatives of the people in all of congress who opposed arming merchant vessels.

The first blast came when Sen. Stone of Missouri, Democratic chairman of the foreign relations committee that had brought the bill to the floor, got up and announced that since he was opposed to the measure, he was relinquishing floor management to Sen. Hitchcock. That put 12 men in the isolationist camp.

SKIPPING the details, I'll tell you right now, in case you don't remember or never heard, those 12 men talked the armed neutrality bill to death. Only by unanimous consent can you end debate for a vote in the senate. When the 64th congress expired Sunday, the senators still were "debating."

The finish had one amusing phase: Sen. LaFollette, although leader of the opposition, had been holding back on the three-hour speech he had worked on for weeks. While other senators struggled through the all-night session the "Old Fox" had some good sleep, a good breakfast, and strolled into the senate at 9 a. m. fresh to take over.

Sen. Hitchcock had the floor when he saw his antagonist coming down the aisle. Knowing the bill already was lost anyway, Sen. Hitchcock held the floor for three solid hours and Sen. LaFollette's fine speech turned to ashes in his pocket.

Nevertheless, it was LaFollette who had the last word. Sen. Hitchcock closed his harangue with the shouted declaration that the bill had been defeated by "12 men in the most reprehensible filibuster in the history of civilized governments."

After a pause and a few calm breaths, he said if those words were too strong, he apologized.

Sen. LaFollette, without rising, shouted dryly: "Well, don't be afraid now. Nobody can answer you."

Both galleries and senators roared and the session ended.

Man With Hobby

It's Not Unusual, But In This Case

The Gent Happens To Be City Editor With A Los Angeles Paper

By DAMON RUNYON

JAMES U. RICHARDSON, city editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, is a man with a hobby. This is unusual for a city editor. As a class, city editors do not have hobbies unless you call work a hobby. Speaking for one, we vote in the negative. Work is work. A hobby is relaxation. Little boys, when you grow up to be big strong men do not become city editors unless you do not care to relax.

One of the few hobby men we encountered in our harrowing experiences among city editors was Delos Avery, now on the staff of the Chicago Herald American. He was city editor of the Denver Republican years ago. His hobby at that time was a diversion called diavolo. You tossed a little ball up in the air and endeavored to catch it on a string, as we remember.

Delos was upon the roof of the Republican building one afternoon indulging in his hobby having dispatched all his reporters about their arduous duties, when Crawford Hill, owner of the paper, came looking for his city editor. Some one told him the city editor was on the roof and Owner Hill went up there and was greatly surprised to observe Delos committing the rites of diavolo, as the Republican was a most conservative publication.

He accepted Delos' resignation and thereafter carefully interrogated applicants for his city editorship as to their hobbies, if any. Gene Fowler used to play the saxophone when he was managing editor of the New York American, but of course a managing editor is different from a city editor and besides is the saxophone a hobby? Some claim it is a vice.

MR. RICHARDSON'S hobby is managing a semi-professional baseball team which plays on Sunday his day off. His team is the Arcadia Merchants of Arcadia Oaks, which is not far from southern California's famous race track, Santa Anita. This proximity is at great convenience to Manager Richardson because he sometimes can prevail upon the race track management to give his baseball players employment during the winter racing season, thus keeping his team intact and abating extreme salary demands on him from the players.

Manager Richardson has been known to pay a star player as high as $4 a baseball game. Only recently he read in some perturbation that there was talk that the Yanks were going to pay $100,000 or some such fantastic sum for Johnny Lindell of Newark, who is one of Manager Richardson's best players in the winter. The manager feared that talk of all this money might arouse Johnny's cupidly and cause him to demand $5 a game with the Merchants this winter.

Manager Richardson raises his salary roll and the rest of the overhead by passing a cigar box among the customers, who contribute whatever they feel that the entertainment is worth. Sometimes a disgruntled customer may not kick in anything. However, the box frequently has returned containing as much as $32. Part of Manager Richardson's overhead is buying a case of beer for his players and if there is any deficit he makes up the difference out of his own pocket.

HE ALSO pays the umpires. One time he had Hap O'Connor, famous as America's guest, and ordinarily Hap would have received $1, the umpirical scale, but his decisions against the Merchants were so villainous that Manager Richardson refused to pay him a dime, thus setting a precedent that might well be followed by other managers. Hap was not so much put out by the reflection upon his umpirical ability as he was by the fact that they also refused to give him any beer.

Manager Richardson is very kind to his players. Once he loaned one of them who was going to get married his tuxedo. Some months later occasion arose in the life of Manager Richardson that required the garment so he asked the player to kindly send it in. He was slightly vexed when the player explained that a male relative had passed away and that he had buried the departed in that same tux.

Auto-Intoxication

By Truman Twill

REMEMBER that the horn was placed on the automobile to paralyze pedestrians with fear, and to force them to die, as a lion roars at its prey, and to maintain the lively tempo of modern times. Don't let that dope at the head of the line dawdle when the light changes. A stop street is no excuse for relaxation. It's the squeaking wheel that gets the grease. Keep that horn going. The highway is no place for peace and quiet.

Bear in mind that one of the important improvements on the automobile is bright headlights. High speeds after dark never would have been possible with carbide tanks, or even the crude electric lamps of a few years ago. As they are in baseball, you can't hit what you can't see. Keep those headlights blazing. Let the dim-wits do the dimming.

Never forget that the motor is a slumbering giant waiting to do its master's bidding. Show mastery. Make it whine for mercy. Don't give it a moment's peace. When it's cold, give it a good, brisk workout. When it's sluggish, give it a good brisk workout. If it hesitates or shows signs of quitting, give it a good, brisk workout. In between times, a good, brisk workout will keep it in condition. Show mastery of the motor.

Be grateful for good brakes. Remember that the passengers in the back seat want to be grateful too. Give them lots of chances and they will always be grateful for the ride and they are receiving—grateful that they came back alive. Science says that barring accidents from unforeseen causes, the car can be stopped in its tracks in 40 feet. Who are you to doubt the word of science?

Always be aware that you are your brother's keeper. Your brother is a menace to society and should not be permitted to drive an automobile. His faults are too numerous to mention, but roll down the window and mention a few anyway. Or if it's inconvenient, mention them to whom it may concern not for your brother, traffic would be harmless.

Don't take that stuff seriously about excessive speed being the cause of accidents. Excessive speed is relative. One man's meat is another's man's poison. For instance, the other fellow shouldn't exceed 35, except when he's driving in front of you, but it would be ridiculous for you to stay within that ridiculously low figure. Anything up to 65 is your dish, hey pal?

And don't be worried because this is the worst time of the year for traffic accidents. Traffic accidents are something that happen to saps. Smart people do not have traffic accidents. They are in complete control of their cars at all times. If anything happens to them, chances are 999 to 1 it will be the other fellow's fault.

MINISTER'S SON LEADS SERVICES FOR YOUTH NIGHT

Ex-Missionary For Japan Says People Continue Faith In Church

Clark R. Cooper, son of the pastor, Rev. Clark W. Cooper, of the First Methodist church, pleaded for a cooperative, not a competitive world, when he led the Youth night services Sunday night. Preceding the pulpit address, the young people's choir, directed by Mrs. Sara Gaston Riel and accompanied by Miss Bernadine Williamson, gave a special program. Announcement was made by the pastor that another son, Rev. James Cooper of near Columbus, will be the guest speaker at the concluding service in November. Clark R. Cooper spoke on "Creative Christianity" last night.

Ex-Missionary Speaks
Despite the war with China and strained relations with the United States, Christians in Japan continue in the faith while those engaged in missionary work there have received "unfailing courtesy," said Rev. Eugene Bernard, missionary on furlough from the Orient, who spoke Sunday at the First Presbyterian church. The Indiana, Pa., pastor led the World fellowship service at the morning worship of the local church.

He was presented to the congregation by Rev. M. Rudolph Miller, the minister. At night, Rev. Miller spoke on the life and the suffering of "a modern Christian martyr," Martin Niemöller, as the festival of the reformation was observed. Rev. Bernard spoke on "Christ and Japan." The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. Francis G. Stewart, pastor of the Emmanuel Presbyterian church.

Members of the church, through its session Sunday morning, expressed its sympathy to the congregation of the Emmanuel church because of the fire which damaged the Park blvd. church property early Saturday.

A resolution signed by Rev. Miller, moderator, and Harry Wildblood, clerk of the session, was read to the congregation, placing on record "its sincere sympathy for its fellow Presbyterians" and also extending "to our unfortunate brethren every means available... to alleviate this hardship."

New Courage Asked
Concluding the session "exhorts the members of the Emmanuel congregation to pledge themselves anew in their loyalty to their particular church and to go forth undaunted with new and fresh courage in the work of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Rev. Stewart, assisted Rev. Miller in the joint service of the two congregations yesterday morning. Members of the four missionary societies of the First church attended the service in a group.

Luther's Life Discussed
Taking cognizance of the annual Reformation day marking the 424th anniversary of Martin Luther, in withdrawing from the established church, from which evolved the present Protestant churches of the world, Rev. John F. Kindsvatter, pastor of the St. John's Lutheran church, declared Sunday the cardinal principles of Protestantism "is the word of God as noted in the Holy Scriptures."

He spoke on the theme, "Why I Am a Protestant." Previous to his sermon, the sacrament of baptism was administered to Carol Lynn Croft, Linda Lee Dawson, Wray Frederick Kindsvatter, Marlene Kay McKinney, Thomas Earl Sell and Darnell Wilkinson.

Members of the St. John's congregation joined in the annual Reformation rally, sponsored by the men of Beaver and Ohio valley, in the Trinity Lutheran church of Ellwood City, Pa. Sunday night when Rev. Elmer A. Ortnor of the Grace Lutheran church of Rochester, was the preacher.

Anniversary Celebrated
Likening the development of the Christian life to that of the unfolding and growth of the lily, Rev. Charles C. Hanks, pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene, led the celebration of the 31st anniversary of the formation of the congregation and called for a continuation of spiritual qualities Sunday morning.

"Consider the lilies of the field," he quoted from the Sermon on the Mount as text for his discourse. In attendance at the congregation's Sunday school were 489 persons.

Rev. Allison Discusses Renewed Church Activity

Though there are some 18 churches, missions and religious organizations functioning in Wells-ville, a large number of the population does not regularly attend services, said Rev. Clark Allison, pastor of the Wellsville Church of the Nazarene Sunday morning.

Forming the men and women of the congregation into two divisions, he outlined ways and means for renewed activity and for interest in those who are not active in any church of the city.

He spoke on the theme "Christian Perfection", and used as a text the declaration of the Apostle Paul, "I press on to the high calling of Jesus Christ."

Your Garden Clinic
By VICTOR H. RIES
Extension Floriculturist Of Ohio State University

The following questions are those asked Prof. Ries recently, either by mail, by telephone or personally at meetings. You may have your questions answered by writing to this newspaper or directly to Prof. Ries, Ohio State University, Columbus.

One of the barberry shrubs we have across the front of the house is dying. They are all probably quite old but all the others seem to be doing well and look very pretty.

There is one lone barberry at the corner of the house at the back that I would like to move to the front to replace the one that is dying. Will you please advise me when is the proper time to transplant this barberry?

The Japanese barberry suffered severely this past summer from the lack of sufficient soil moisture. That is why I am recommending that, when new ones are planted, they be replaced with a hybrid of the Japanese barberry, the Mentor barberry.

Barberries, like most other shrubs, can be transplanted anytime when they are not in leaf, in the case of moving an old one, may I suggest you take an ample ball of earth with the roots so that you will not have to prune it too severely.

Will this year's pansy plants winter over in a cold frame? Pansy plants are hardy annuals and the method normally used in their culture is to sow the seed in August and transplant the seedlings either to a cold frame or even to the open ground.

If out of doors in the open they should be mulched with straw during the winter. In a cold frame, they may be either mulched with straw with no sash or covered with boards during winter.

What var. grass is best to use for a lawn on a hilltop open to all the elements and to no shade? According to our lawn specialists at the agricultural experiment station at Wooster, Kentucky bluegrass still is the best all around grass for sunny Ohio locations.

I suggest you ask your county agent for a copy of our bulletin on lawns and write to the Ohio agricultural experiment station at Wooster for a copy of its bulletin on the control of lawn weeds and the rejuvenation of lawns.

STOCKS FOLLOW TWO-WAY TRAIL

Some Leaders Make Gains, Others Show Declines

By VICTOR EUBANK
Associated Press Staff Writer
NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—It was a two-way trail in today's stock market with an assortment of leaders tacking on modest advances while many others slipped behind fractional minus signs.

Among early resistant performers were Chrysler, American Telephone, International Nickel, Southern Pacific and American Airlines.

Backward were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Western Union, Westinghouse, General Electric, Douglas Aircraft, Goodrich, General Motors and J. I. Case.

In addition to the darkening labor picture, market followers noted which stressed the shortage of scrap as one of the major factors in stemming the rising tide of steel production.

The publication pointed out that lack of semi-finished steel was limiting production of wire and wire products, with the most apparent squeeze being in nails. Deliveries of the latter for civilian purposes, it was said, now are deferred several weeks.

CHICAGO GRAIN
CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—Wheat prices declined more than a cent a bushel at the opening today in a continuation of selling due largely to uncertainty about new price legislation and restriction on use of foreign assets of foreign nations.

Opening 1 1/4 to 1 cent lower, Dec. 1.14-1.14, May 1.19-1.18, wheat later rallied, Corn 1.19-1.18, lower, Dec. 75, May 81 1/2.

MINE STRIKE

companies have only a week's coal supply on hand. There was general agreement that a protracted strike would hurt steel production.

In rejecting the President's original request to defer the walkout, Lewis said that 40 days of hearings by the defense mediation board had proved futile.

The board's report to President Roosevelt that it had been unable to bring about an agreement, he said, was "devoted of conclusions as to merit, evasive as to the responsibilities of the board" and "dumps its own sorry mess into the already overburdened lap of the chief executive."

He blamed Sidney Hillman, associate chief of defense production and leader of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers union, for the "fantastic procedure which has been followed."

He asserted Hillman had used his "great powers to intimidate government agencies to a point where they deprive legitimate organizations of labor of the right to a judicial determination of their grievances under the law."

Lewis agreed to hold himself "in momentary readiness" for a conference with Taylor, but remarked that he had heard Taylor would not serve because he could represent only U. S. Steel.

The mines involved are in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky and Alabama. Under the union shop demanded by the UMW all miners employed in them would be required to join the union.

Strike Shuts Down

Huge Brooklyn Shipyards

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—A strike today silenced the busy giant yards of the Robins Drydock and Repair Co. in Brooklyn where at least 14 vessels, including one U. S. government craft, are being overhauled or awaiting repairs.

Officials of the Industrial Marine and Shipbuilders Workers of America (CIO) who called the strike last night, said it is 100 percent effective.

They said that 5,800 workers out of 6,000 are out and that most of the 200 workmen who entered the yards were fire watchers, fire guards, police guards and others given special passes by the union to keep the plant in operating condition.

Crux of the dispute is a 5 percent wage increase which union officials contended the company had promised and then withdrawn.

"We welcome the intervention of the national defense mediation board and are perfectly willing to have that agency use its good offices to settle this dispute," said John H. Borge, regional director of the union.

Management representatives at the plant had no comment. Company officials planned to meet in Manhattan today.

Borge said the strike would end immediately after the workers received assurances from either the company or other responsible quarters that the wage increases would be put into effect. Present scales were not given.

3,000 Ordered Out

At West Coast Shipyards

By The Associated Press.
LOS ANGELES, Oct. 27.—Three thousand welders in the giant shipyards of the Long Beach-Los Angeles harbor area were ordered out on strike today, but there was no immediate indication as to how many will heed the call.

Karl V. Morris, national president of the United Welders, Cutters and Helpers of America, an independent union, said 2,000 members voted overwhelmingly for the walkout at a mass meeting last night.

The action is an attempt to gain recognition of the welders as a craft and force the American Federation of Labor to grant them a charter and a vote.

Vice President John A. McCone of the California Shipbuilding Corp. said a contract with the AFL metal trades council had been negotiated after he received a petition "signed by virtually every man engaged in the building of ships at our plant."

SCRAP SHORTAGE HAMPER'S STEEL

Interruption Of Steelmaking Becomes More Frequent

By The Associated Press.
CLEVELAND, Oct. 27.—Interruptions of steelmaking because of the scrap shortage are becoming more frequent, the magazine Steel says today.

"Several open hearths have been shut down at Buffalo and similar action elsewhere has been averted by scrap being diverted to plants in need," the review adds. "Increasingly operations are being carried on without reserves, on the basis of daily shipments. The allocations plan has not been applied, awaiting reports from the industry. Fundamental differences between the scrap trade and other branches of the steel industry result in new problems when allocation is attempted."

"Labor interruption at Detroit, which reduced production there at one-third capacity, and shutdown of several open hearths at Buffalo because of scrap shortage, caused the production rate (of steel ingots) to drop 1 percent to 95 1/2 percent last week. Detroit rate declined 36 points to 32 percent of capacity and Buffalo 94 points to 83 percent. Cleveland also dropped 2 points to 97 percent as an open hearth was taken off."

Other district changes included: Pittsburgh up 1 to 99, Wheeling up 1 to 94, Cincinnati up 34 to 91 1/2, Youngstown was steady at 98.

"Lack of semi-finished steel is limiting production of wire and wire products, the most apparent squeeze being in nails," the review says. "Recent advance of a cent a pound in the ceiling price on zinc has added to difficulties of galvanizing producers, their costs already high."

Mr. Novakovic received a $10 cash prize from the Beaver county banks through their Clearing house association.

The morning session eliminated nine of the 20 contestants leaving the following to compete in the afternoon: Joe Dusold, Anthony Iverlich and John Dusold of Center township.

Lester Schweinsberg and Andrew Leomberg of New Sewickley township; Elmer Goehring of Marlon township, C. M. Palm of Green township, Charles Ackman of Hanover township, and Frank Volk Jr. and John A. Beck of North Sewickley township.

All received cash awards.

The county Pomona Grange and the agricultural extension service sponsored the affair. Dan Brenner of New Sewickley township was chairman.

STEPHENSON TO TALK AT REPUBLICAN RALLY

All candidates and partyworkers have been invited, said Carl Veigel, president of the club, who will be in charge. Committee reports will be heard.

PEDESTRIAN VANISHES AFTER AUTO HITS HIM

Police today listed a new kind of hit-skip case in which the pedestrian hit by an auto skipped and couldn't be located by the motorist.

Howard Treleven of 527 Palissey st. reported a man stepped into the path of his auto Saturday night about 8:25 on the Wellsville-East Liverpool road.

Mr. Treleven said he turned his car around as quickly as possible to find the pedestrian but he said he found no trace of the man.

Firemen Farmers

PHILADELPHIA — Farm chores are getting to be part of a fireman's job in eastern Pennsylvania.

One company recently had to lure an angry cow into a pasture before tackling a barn fire and now Philadelphia firemen have just finished a 16-hour stint of pitching hay to get to flames smoldering two weeks in a state hospital storehouse.

Narrow Escape

CHARLOTTE, N. C. — The man in the automobile slammed on his brakes and with a shock realized the tremulous call for "help!" was directly in front of his car. Several persons on the curb paused and looked.

There before them, stalking majestically across the street, was Miss Madeline Crow's Parrot.

CHAPTER NINE

NOW as she picked up the cake from the table and started back to join him, she experienced a feeling of eagerness, which was unreasonable after all her conclusions. She found herself looking forward to the evening. She made herself believe that it was to please Ginny she had given her consent to go on the picnic.

She found Johnny seated on the porch step, with his brown head tipped back against one of the great columns and his eyes gazing up into the green, shadowy foliage of the magnolia overhead.

He had a fine face. His profile stood out clearly against the white column. He heard her step and sprang to his feet.

"I'm falling under the spell of it," he said, and laughed and held out his hand for the basket which she carried.

"What spell?" But she knew. It was the sweet-scented southern air and the southern moon just rising over the distant treetops and the smell of box and the great columns of the portico. It was all this and more. The traditions which went with all this, the century of gracious living which had gone on in the house behind them. It was a part of herself and she understood it and the sudden softening in her feeling toward Johnny, because he understood, made her angry with herself and him.

"The spell of the South," he answered.

She said bluntly "Don't let it get you."

Johnny Harris touched her hand. "It has me already. You know that, don't you, Sue Ellen?"

But she only laughed and moved away from him down the brick-paved walk which led to the gate.

Sue Ellen Fairhope returned from the Sunday evening picnic at Haller hollow and stood for a long time at her bedroom window gazing out into the November night.

This evening had changed her relations with Johnny Harris. She had been unsuccessful in turning aside his determination to tell her quite frankly that he loved her. She had tried to convince him that she was engaged to Riv Moore and that they planned to marry in June, and he had stubbornly replied: "A great deal can happen between November and June. A great deal will happen to you—and to me."

"That's true," agreed Sue Ellen. "We may be in the war and that will take you halfway across the country. But as for me—nothing can change between Riv and myself."

Back at Magnolia house, Aunt Car announced that Riv had called shortly after eight and had been greatly upset because she was not at home.

Sue Ellen paused, halfway up the stairway, her hat dangling from her hand, her topcoat over her arm, her hair dark and dusky under the overhead lights, her eyes eager. After this she would be kinder to Riv. She would show everyone that Riv belonged to her. This afternoon had been a mistake and one she did not intend to repeat.

"What did he say?" she asked now.

"That he must see you as soon as possible. That he had something to tell you."

She went down the stairs, her hand on the door handle, her heart beating. She was going to see Riv. She was going to tell him that she loved him.

At Sue Ellen's call, she raised her head. "Riv called. He wants to see you in Washington immediately. He called, but you were not up, so he left a note."

She held the note in her hand and Sue Ellen ran down the winding staircase to take it from her. She carried it back to her room, sat down on the bed and tore open the envelope.

"Sue Dear," it began. "Sorry to have to rush off like this, especially as there is something you should know and I don't want to discuss it in a letter. I hope it will not interfere with our wedding in the spring. I could not lose you, darling. I love you always. Please—please do not think too badly of me if you should hear any unpleasant gossip before I can see you and explain.—Riv."

The letter fell to the floor. She picked it up and re-read it. What did Riv mean? What must he explain? Could it be the something she had caught in Ginny's glance? In Johnny Harris's startling statement that eventually she would marry him?

After reading Riv's note several times, Sue Ellen forced herself to believe that she was reading all sorts of mysterious things into his letter which simply told her that he had been called to Washington to meet the Colonel. Naturally there would be things for them to discuss upon his return. Naturally he owed her an apology for going with Deedora on Sunday afternoon.

It was unusual for Riv to be so insistent and she felt a slight unhappiness. Possibly her late whim had been a mistake; trying to show Riv that she could have a good time without him might heighten his eagerness to be with her, make him give up flirtations with girls like Deedora Waller, but after all she owed her first loyalty to him.

"He went off this afternoon with Deedora Waller," she told her aunt slowly.

"In my day an engagement meant something," Aunt Car's soft mouth tightened. "Why should Riv want to be with any other girl but you?"

"He doesn't love Deedora; she amuses him."

Aunt Car shook her head. "I don't like it. If he loves you—"

Sue Ellen smiled and turned to mount the stairs. "You forget things are quite different now than in your day."

"Love isn't different," said Aunt Car stoutly.

Was Aunt Car right? Was love the same in every age and did she fool herself when she imagined that what Riv felt for her and what she felt for Riv was love—real love?

A nice thought for a bride-to-be, she told herself.

What had Riv wanted that was so important? Could he have decided to carry out their first plan for a December wedding? She wished that might be the reason why he wished to see her—that Riv's message might hurry up their wedding. Then she would go away from Mississippi and never hear anything more about Camp Shelby. She would never meet Johnny Harris again.

She went to bed hoping that Riv's message would be glad news, although convinced in spite of herself that it was not good news.

What could it be? A longer postponement?

She would refuse to consent to that. She would tell Riv that she could not bear to be separated from him and would persuade him to hasten instead of postpone their wedding.

She ran over in her mind the clothes she would have to buy and how they would be managed. She would call Riv in the morning. She would profit by Johnny Harris's example and announce that she would not do this or that—she would have things her way.

"Some day you will belong to me," Johnny had said. She tried to forget the words and to erase the picture of him standing with the fireglow bright on his thin face, as he told her he loved her.

Belonging to Riv, she said to herself over and over, and tried to believe the words, only to find the thought slipping away from her and the thought Johnny repeated so insistently taking its place.

"Some day you'll belong to me." She awoke with a start to find that it was late in the morning. Rain beat against her window and drifted across the faded velvet carpet.

She ran across the room in her bare feet to pull down the window, and through the broad magnolia leaves caught a glimpse of a car standing at the gate.

It was Riv's car, but before she could snatch up her housecoat and slide into slippers, she heard the car pull away.

Halfway down the stairs, she saw Aunt Pleas disappearing in the direction of the pantry.

At Sue Ellen's call, she raised her head. "Riv called. He wants to see you in Washington immediately. He called, but you were not up, so he left a note."

She held the note in her hand and Sue Ellen ran down the winding staircase to take it from her. She carried it back to her room, sat down on the bed and tore open the envelope.

"Sue Dear," it began. "Sorry to have to rush off like this, especially as there is something you should know and I don't want to discuss it in a letter. I hope it will not interfere with our wedding in the spring. I could not lose you, darling. I love you always. believe that she was reading all sorts of mysterious things into his letter which simply told her that he had been called to Washington to meet the Colonel. Naturally there would be things for them to discuss upon his return. Naturally he owed her an apology for going with Deedora on Sunday afternoon.

She dressed and went down to breakfast. A morning telephone call brought all her doubts flocking back. Ginny called. She said: "Listen, I think you should know that Riv took Deedora Waller with him to Washington this morning."

"I know—he left a note to tell me."

That being but a half truth, Sue Ellen hastily changed the subject, although her thoughts were not upon Ginny's chatter about the picnic the night before, but upon this new fact which required an explanation. Possibly it was necessary for Deedora to go to Washington and the trip was made up of the Colonel's request. She framed excuses for Riv and at the same time read into Riv's note the reason for his demand that she should not think ill of him. He had come to talk with her, for she had seen him outside in his car. She convinced Ginny, if not herself, that there was nothing unreasonable in one's fiancée acting as escort to another girl.

"Anything wrong?" asked Aunt Car, as Sue Ellen hung up the receiver and, crossing the room, sank down into a chair.

"No—only I wish Riv were not so ready to run about doing things for Deedora Waller. It causes a lot of unpleasant gossip and explanation. I trust Riv," she added hurriedly, as her aunt's face betrayed a rising uneasiness. "It's just that he is impulsive and easily influenced. When we are married things will be different."

Aunt Car neither affirmed nor denied this, but bent over her tapestry.

"After I'm married things will be different, won't they, Aunt Car?" she repeated.

"I've had no experience," reminded Aunt Car briefly.

From the rear of the house came the haunting strains of an old Negro spiritual. "I ain't goin' to study wah no moah." Aunt Jennie sang mournfully. Aunt Jennie's mood was always set to music.

Roosevelt Emphasizes U. S. Aims At Smashing Of Hitler

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—President Roosevelt said Saturday that "the real end, the inescapable end" of American foreign policy "is the destruction of the Hitler menace."

"In achieving this end," he said in a message read to the Foreign Policy association, "our responsibility is fully as great as that of the peoples who are fighting and dying for it. I know that our country will not shrink from that responsibility nor will we make whatever sacrifices it may demand."

His message keyed a report on the nation's foreign policy presented by political and defense officials before the association's forum here.

"Every Child Knows Policy" "Every school child knows what our foreign policy is," the President wrote.

"It is to defend the honor, the freedom, the rights, the interests and well-being of the American people. We seek no gain at the expense of others. We threaten no one, nor do we tolerate threats from others. No nation is more deeply dedicated to the ways of peace; no nation is fundamentally stronger to resist aggression."

It is in line with this policy, he said, that "our people have decided, and they are constantly becoming more determined, that Hitler's threat to everything for which we stand must be struck down."

The President's statement attacked the "few persons in this country who seek to lull us into a false sense of security, to tell us that we are not threatened, that all we need do to avoid the storm is to sit idly by—and to submit supinely if necessary."

The course of submission, the President wrote, already has been rejected by the nation because "the American people are not easily fooled."

"We do not take orders as to what we shall think," Mr. Roosevelt said. "We judge the facts for ourselves and decide what course we must follow. A free people with a free press makes up its own mind. We reach grave decisions slowly, but when they are made they are backed by the determination of 130,000,000 free Americans and are inexorable."

Let Guests Choose Own Costumes At Halloween 'Cafeteria' Party

BLACK SATEEN BOLERO, red skirt, yellow sash, white blouse, red flower for the hair - a Spanish dancer! Pretty, no?

MULTI - BANDED SKIRT, red bolero, yellow blouse and sash, red headkerchief - a Gypsy! Take the tambourine.

CUT TROUSERS full and long, add ribbon ankle ties, edge the bolero with gilt bells, add cheese-cloth sash - a harem girl!

BLACK SATEEN SHORTS, royal blue sash, white shirt, red bolero and bandanna, curtain rings for ears. A pirate!

By HELEN FORRIST HALL
AP Feature Service Writer
EVERYBODY loves a dress-up party. You can supply your guests with costumes by selecting one easy-to-make, inexpensive pattern that includes several parts.

Why not a "cafeteria style" party? It will be bubble, bubble, toil - no trouble.

Special for the day would be long planks laid on saw-horses for the cafeteria, covered in bright Halloween paper.

The piece de resistance, of course, is the wild medley of costumes spread out on the table for guests to assemble for themselves. The simplicity pattern may include full skirt, shorts, bolero, kerchief and blouse that can be translated into almost anything, depending upon the colors of the cheese-cloth and sateen you use for different costumes.

A pile of junk jewelry, artificial flowers, ribbons, a tambourine if you can scare one up - and the party is off to a mad scramble as the guests pick their costumes and depart to put them on. No cafeteria is a cafeteria with out a tray so round up all you can find and stack them at one end of the table for feeding time. Then just set out the cider, candied apples-on-a-stick, the gingerbread and doughnuts, Halloween candies and nuts - and put sandwich makings there, too, so the guests can "build their own."

From this point on, leave them alone! They may never go home, but you'll have a roaring success to your credit!

BRICKER FIGHTS OUSTER DEMAND

To Appeal Order Removing Cincinnati BUC Head

By The Associated Press.
COLUMBUS, Oct. 27—Administration H. C. Atkinson of the bureau of unemployment compensation said Saturday he had been told that Gov. John W. Bricker will ask the attorney general to appeal to the federal courts an order of the U. S. civil service commission demanding removal of Harry J. Patterson, manager of the BUC's Cincinnati office.

The commission reported a week ago that Patterson had violated the Hatch "clean politics" act and gave the state 30 days in which to remove him. Unless that is done, the commission said that a sum equal to Patterson's salary for two years would be withheld from the state.

Gov. Bricker will confer next Thursday with Arthur S. Fleming, a member of the civil service commission, which has demanded an "explanation" of Bricker's recent assertion that the federal agency planned a "political raid" on the BUC.

Atkinson is not expected to take any action in relation to Patterson until after that conference.

Bricker's "political raid" remark came as he refused the civil service commission permission to set up headquarters in the BUC headquarters here to question employees whether their superior had sought to influence them politically.

Patterson was one of 10 employees of the BUC's Cincinnati office called before the civil service commission last August to answer charges they violated the Hatch act which prohibits pernicious political activity by persons paid wholly or in part with federal funds.

Human Nature Quiz

Why does a girl pretend to love a man when she doesn't — and pretend to be indifferent when she does?

Why does she try to make a man jealous when she's perfectly true to him and go to every length to avoid making him jealous when she's double-crossing him?

Why is a man more eagerly devoted to a girl when she has eyes for other men and a few "spares" in the offing than when she is devoted to him alone?

Why does he so often pass up the girl who could help him make a success of himself and run after the one who encourages him to make a fool of himself?

Why does he beg a woman to be perfectly frank with him and then feel shocked or bored if she tells him she loves him, and sore if she tells him that she loves somebody else?

Why does a woman think that she can buy a man's love by making life soft and easy for him? And why does that kind of man try to buy back his self-respect by spending his wife's money on other women?

Why will a woman marry a play-boy or take in order to "reform" him when she is born with the knowledge that nobody ever changed a man above the ears, except his barber — or a woman like Delilah?

Why is a man so much more anxious and particular about the appearance of the girls he takes to night clubs or his fraternity dances than he is about the one he leads to the altar?

Why does he make up his mind exactly what kind of girl (if any) he would like to marry and then spend so much of his time playing around with the other kind that he gets hooked by one of them?

Why is it impossible to give a woman enough flattery to keep up her morale and feed her vanity and almost impossible NOT to flatter a man, no matter how innocent your intention?

And why do a man and woman who are not in love treat each other with so much consideration and courtesy while a couple who are in love spend most of their evenings torturing each other with quarrels and jealousy?

Anyone answering all these questions adequately will receive a sweeping bow and three loud cheers.

CONSERVATION GROUP ADOPTS RESOLUTIONS

Special To The Review.
LISBON, Oct. 27—The conservation committee of the Columbiana County Fish and Game association forwarded resolutions today to the state department of conservation after they were adopted at a meeting attended by 50 farmers and sportsmen Friday night in the Grange hall.

The resolutions would prohibit commercial dealers from taking bait from Guilford and Pine lakes, forbid use of trot lines, continue the county stream improvement and require closing of Guilford and East Palestine lakes from Dec. 1 to June 16 and close all streams from May 1 to June 16 to fishing.

George Messerly of the state department, in a resume of the stocking program, said county streams and lakes received 17,075 rock bass, 50,000 golden shiner minnows, 1,800 small-mouthed bass, 730 large-mouthed bass, 5,000 crayfish, 5,000 blue gills, 5,500 catfish, 8,000 crappies and 5,000 frogs under the state's replenishing program.

Richard Andrus, association president, was chairman.

Unbeaten, Untied Ohio Teams Cut To 3 In Week-End Games

By The Associated Press.
COLUMBUS, Oct. 27—Ohio's unbeaten and untied football contingent stood at three today, but after scanning the schedule for the rest of the campaign the "lost one" group saw chances for a share of the state collegiate crown.

Ohio Wesleyan, Case and Wittenberg were perched at the peak, the Battling Bishops with five victories, and the Scientists and Lutherans with four each. Youngstown is on their heels with five conquests and a tie.

Bowling Green came through with the most resounding upset of the year, battling Heidelberg's Student Princes out of both the state and Ohio conference leaderships Saturday by the unlooked for score of 39-0-6. Ohio State's Bucks also bowed out of the "clean" class, but looked good while losing to Northwestern's mighty men, 14-7.

Lutherans Face Rough Road
Wittenberg, boasting the only unsullied goal line in the Buckeye realm, and defending both the state and Ohio loop championships, has a rough road ahead. Each of the remaining foes of the Stobben is in the upper half of the Ohio loop standing, and none has suffered more than one defeat. The Lutherans face Heidelberg, Bowling Green, Wooster and Denison, each capable of giving the Springfielders a tussle.

Wesleyan must brush aside Akron, Ohio university. Case has Michigan State, while Case has Carnegie Tech. Baldwin-Wallace and Western Reserve, along with Wesleyan, as future opponents. Youngstown tangles with Tennessee Tech and Akron's Zippers.

With the odds indicating that no team will duplicate Wittenberg's "win 'em all" feat of 1940, the tough Dayton, Xavier and Western Reserve outfits have an outside chance to cash in on a portion of the title.

Loss One Each
That trio has lost one game each. Tennessee tripping Dayton, Xavier bowing to Kentucky, and Michigan Western State Teachers beating Reserve.

This week's games:
Friday night: Denison at Marietta, Carnegie Tech at Case, Bluffton at Findlay; Tennessee Tech at Youngstown.

Saturday: Ohio State at Pittsburgh, Muskingum at Ohio Northern, Wittenberg at Heidelberg, Mount Union at Wooster, Kenyon at Oberlin, Bowling Green at Kent State, Capital at Oberlin, John Carroll at Western Reserve, Davis and Elkins at Baldwin-Wallace, Toledo at Illinois Wesleyan, Miami

Chicago Bears Await Crucial Packer Battle

Game May Decide Western Title Of Pro Loop

By TOM SILER
Associated Press Sports Writer
CHICAGO, Oct. 27—The Green Bay Packers will learn next Sunday whether they've been on a wild goose chase since the National Football league season began.

The incomparable Don Hutson and his mates knocked over Detroit and Cleveland before bowing to the undefeated Chicago Bears in Green Bay five weeks ago. Since then the Bears and Packers have bowled over everything in sight, marking time until their second encounter.

This meeting comes Sunday in Wrigley field. If the Bears win they will be virtually certain of representing the west in the championship playoff.

Eastern Race A Scramble
The eastern race was thrown into a scramble between Washington and New York yesterday when Brooklyn snapped back from three straight defeats to whip the Giants, 16-13. Ace Parker, league's most valuable player in 1940, sparked the Dodge attack which broke the Giants' winning string at five straight.

Washington, a half game behind the Giants, outlasted Cleveland to win, 17-13. The Redskins have won four of five engagements, but their winning margin in no single contest has exceeded four points.

The Bears notched their fifth straight over a stubborn Pittsburgh eleven, 34-7. Green Bay also had an easy time, whipping Detroit, 24-7, with Huston in another field day.

The Chicago Cardinals started too late to catch the Philadelphia Eagles, losing by 21-14.

Sunday's games attracted 121,664 spectators, boosting the season's attendance to 646,141.

Quarterbacking

By SID LUCKMAN
... Chicago Bears, All-League Quarterback ...

Quarterbacking, basically, is a succession of do's and don'ts, the first of which is "don't do as Luckman does; do as he tells you."

For Luckman sometimes discovers himself practicing something no self-respecting quarterback would design to preach. We call these errors in judgment. Our Coach, George Halas, has a much more explicit name for them—also for the offending quarterback.

To successfully direct a team the quarterback should at all times know the position of the ball, the line of scrimmage, the field, and the time remaining to be played. He must keep a constant watch on the defense to know whether it is using a zone defense or a man-to-man system or both in covering pass receivers, whether the backs are playing too close or to wide.

He must rely upon his linemen for information on the play of the opposing team, for there is no sense in going outside a tackle, for instance, when it is easier to go inside of him.

The most important part of his job, however, is a thorough knowledge of every play in the team's repertoire—in the Bears' case 350 and a careful study of each team's capabilities and condition at every stage of the game.

It is impossible to tell what plays you will call until you have seen the defense. Contrary to some reports, Bill Osmanski's 64-yard touchdown run on the second play of the championship game last year was not a series play (one of several that follow in a definite sequence) nor had we planned before we went on the field to use it.

Washington's defensive strategy, revealed on our first smash, seemed to me to be cut for the Osmanski maneuver. Unless we gummed it up ourselves, I was confident when I called it that Bill would go for a long gain.

As a general rule, however, quarterbacks use a strong basic play on first down to get as many yards as possible. On second down, the principle is to call something sneaky and tricky, some play where you cut loose. On third down you

MIDLAND'S LEOPARDS BOW TO BEAVER, 18-7

Special To The Review.
MIDLAND, Oct. 27—Coach Bill Walters' Leopard eleven went down to its seventh consecutive defeat here Saturday afternoon, 18-7, before a strong Beaver Falls team.

The Leopards' only touchdown came in the final period when Gernusko plunged over from the four-yard line after a Beaver Falls fumble had been recovered on the latter's 13.

The visitors used the first and second periods in which to do all their scoring, one coming in the opener and two in the second.

Tate, Tiger fullback, tallied all three Beaver touchdowns. In the first quarter he drove over from the four-yard line, and in the following stanza scampered 62 yards over the Midland goal following a pass interception. He added the final score on a four-yard plunge in the same period. None of the

LISBON CRUSHED IN LEAGUE GAME

Blue Devils Swamped, 27-0, By Louisville Eleven

Special To The Review.
LISBON, Oct. 27—The Blue Devils bowed in defeat here Saturday afternoon, 27-0, as the Tri-County league leaders, Louisville, retained its position atop the loop.

Led by Right Halfback Eason, Lisbon made its lone threat in the second quarter when the Blue Devils drove to the six-inch line where the ball was lost on downs.

In the first period two passes, Callan to Skelley, took the ball to the five-yard line for the visitors and Skelley carried it over; Miller converted the extra point.

Two more touchdowns were chalked up by Louisville in the second quarter. After parading 40 yards to the Lisbon 28, Callan broke away on two runs to cross the Lisbon goal. Kintner booted the seventh point from placement.

Later in the same period, Callan intercepted an aerial at midfield. Skelley and Callan lugged the pigskin to the 35. Kintner picked up five to the 30 and then Callan flipped a 30-yard pass to Skelley for the score. Kintner failed to convert.

Callan returned a punt 15 yards to the Blue Devils' 18 in the fourth period, and then passed to Skelley for the touchdown. Kintner's placement made the 27th point.

Fans Proud Of State's Bucks Even In 14-7 Defeat By 'Cats

By FRITZ HOWELL
Associated Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Oct. 27—If you are one of those misguided souls who believe there's nothing new under the sun, you should chat a bit with a few of the folks who sat in Ohio State's stadium Saturday as the Bucks bowed to Northwestern, 14-7.

There was a day around this football-mad town when defeat sent the fans home grumbling; when the coach and the team were "on the pan" for days as the downtown quarterbacks explained to each other how the game should have been won.

But the 71,896 who saw Saturday's setback seemed as proud of the Bucks as they were the day, not so long ago, that the same club pounded out an unexpected 33-to-0 conquest over Southern California. In fact, the fans appeared a little "strutty" about the Bucks.

Brown Hailed As Hero
Coach Paul E. Brown was hailed as a hero for the showing made by the Bucks against the highly-rated 'Cats. No one was blamed for the defeat, and there was an under-current of "we've got a chance to beat Michigan" in all the conversations.

A few months ago when Brown moved up from his high school job at Massillon, he promised Ohio fans.

"We'll have a well-conditioned team. We expect to lose, now and then, but they'll have to kill us by inches—for no one will run over us."

And the fans who sat in on the Wildcat game knew he spoke the truth. Twice the Bucks, after giving ground in midfield, hurried the heavier and faster Wildcat back on the one-yard line, and again on the 10. The two Wildcat triumphs came through the air—the "easy" way. Ohio staged a 70-yard march for its score, and might have wound up in a tie had the first half been a few seconds longer. The gun found the Bucks on the three yard line, with two seconds to go.

Fumble Paves Way
A fumble by Fullback Bob Hecklinger on the 16-yard line—the only glaring Ohio mistake of the day—gave Northwestern the ball for the winning touchdown, which went over two plays later. But there was no criticism of the boy who fumbled, either by the fans, Brown or the kid's team mates.

The loss wrecked Ohio's chances for an undefeated season—but the fans, who had been expecting the under-manned Bucks to lose even earlier than this, took it in stride.

Sport Chatter

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.
NEW YORK, Oct. 27—(The Special News Service)—After surveying the week's football results, there seems to be a question of whether Army's Earl Blaik or Harvard's Dick Harlow should get the nomination for the coach of the year award for what they've done with teams that weren't drawing anything but laughs when the season started.

Local football fans, who were chilly to Jawns Kimbrough last week, gave him a swell wedding present yesterday by cheering their heads off for him while his fiancée, Barbara Golding, was in the stands.

The hospital where Abe Simon had his operation had to get a special bed big enough for him. One local big was claimed it wasn't Abe's appendix the doctor removed but Lem Franklin's boxing glove.

When Pappy Joe DiMaggio heard the good news the other day, he wired Tavern-Keeper Toots Shor to lock up the cigars until he arrived to throw a party.

College golfers had better watch out for Georgetown's Jack Donohue, who won the college title for the third time last Friday although he's only a junior. He did it with a 66.

If you can believe all you hear, Earl Blaik was a touch annoyed last year when New England scribes started boosting Frank Leahy for the Dartmouth coaching job before Earl had quit. And he's not likely to forget it when he sends his Army boys against Frank's Notre Dames Saturday.

SALINEVILLE EDGES CUMBERLAND 6-TO-0

Special To The Review.
NEW CUMBERLAND, Oct. 27—An 80-yard return of a punt enabled Left Halfback Webb to give Salineville High gridders a 6-0 victory over the New Cumberland eleven here Saturday afternoon before 300 fans.

The home eleven's only serious threat came in the opening period when it punched the line to the Salineville eight where they lost the ball on downs. Although dominating play throughout the first half, the local gridders did not have the punch to score.

Salineville outplayed Coach Tom Cullison's team in the second half, and finally got a six pointer in the third period on Webb's brilliant run.

The first downs 10 to six for Salineville.

UNBEATEN ARMY, NAVY TO BATTLE TOUGH FOES IN WEEK'S TOP GAMES

Other Headline Attractions To Include Northwestern And Minnesota, Fordham And Purdue; 11 Major Elevens Remain In Undefeated Class

By HAROLD CLAASSEN
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Oct. 27—Football fans will be saving their dimes and box tops or pawning their summer suits for any seats at the featured games on this week-end's bill that includes Army vs. Notre Dame, Navy vs. Penn. and Northwestern vs. Minnesota.

Of those six teams, only Northwestern has been beaten although Navy was tied Saturday by a hard-charging Harvard machine, 0-0.

Last week-end's prolific firing brought the country's elevens to the November mark with only 11 major unbeaten untied aggregations and three others tied once or more, though undefeated.

Geographically they are split this way:
Pacific coast: None.
Midwest: Minnesota, Notre Dame, Rocky Mountains: Utah (tied twice).
Southwest: Texas and Texas A. & M.
South: Vanderbilt, Duke, Mississippi State (tied).
East: Army, Fordham, Navy (tied), Pennsylvania, Temple, Duquesne.

None has a soft tough week-end and any one of them may be listed among the also-rans Saturday night as are Santa Clara, Villanova, Michigan State, Detroit and Rutgers for the first time today.

The week's program, by sections includes:
East.
Army marched through Columbia, 14-0, and now must confront Notre Dame, likewise unbeaten, before a sell-out crowd in New York. Over in Philadelphia, Navy defends an uncrossed goal line against a Penn team that has whipped four straight foes. Every one of the 73,381 tickets for the contest already has been sold. Duquesne, a 31-to-14 victory over Marquette to stay in the unbeaten group, takes on Villanova, upset by Manhattan, while Boston college entertains Temple, another unbeaten eleven, at Boston.

Another fray finds Fordham's unblemished record at stake in a meeting with Purdue of the Big Ten. The Rams clipped Texas Christian Saturday, 28-14, after being held even in the first half.

Columbia, Army's latest victim, treks to Cornell, 21-to-2 winner over Colgate.

Midwest.
Minnesota, with Capt. Smith and a horde of others bruised in the 7-to-0 win over Michigan, hopes to be in shape again for the visit of Northwestern, in the third chapter of the Big Ten title mystery. The Wildcats pushed Ohio State out of the all-victorious class, 14-7, last Saturday.

The Buckeyes take on Pittsburgh, which scored its first touchdown of the year in losing to Duke, 27-7, and the Wolverines seek solace in their contest with Illinois, bounced by Notre Dame, 49-14.

Iowa, spilled by Purdue, 7-6, and Indiana, loser to Wisconsin in a 27-to-25 thriller, tangle at Iowa City while the Badgers entertain Syracuse and the potent Y formation that shoved Rutgers among the beaten teams, 49-7.

Missouri, 6-to-0 winner over Nebraska, seeks to start another winning streak against Manhattan.

Pacific coast.
Stanford, back on the conference top with a 13-to-7 win over Washington, steps outside the league bounds for a meeting with Santa Clara, smarting from a 16-to-6 setback by Oklahoma. That upset almost equalled the noise caused by Oregon's 14-to-7 loss to UCLA which resulted in a second-place tie between the two clubs.

Oregon goes against Washington State, 7-to-0 winner over Oregon State, while the Uclans are paired with California, which blanked Southern California, 14-0. The Trojans are idle until the Stanford meeting next week.

Fiery Grid Team?

FAYETTE, Ark.—It's difficult to keep Freshman Coach Clyde Van Sickle of the University of Arkansas from pitching in and helping the Fayetteville fire department boys. Van Sickle spent four years as a volunteer fireman in Fayetteville while attending the University of Arkansas from 1925 through 1929. He roomed at the fire station and carried the nickname "The Fireman."
